What the evening is about:

As practitioners our work should reflect evidence based best practice, yet this is sometimes lost in the NDIS environment. For example, a person living with an intellectual disability may have a goal of maintaining their independence and an agency may be contracted to support the person maintain their home. The person wants a young attractive female support worker to do all of their housework and be their slave.

There are many such dilemmas in the NDIS environment

Sam is an experienced no nonsense presenter who has will lead discussion and debate on this important topic.

The evening is also an opportunity to share a meal with others and network

Hear about the work of ASID and hear about the Australasian ASID Conference to be held in Adelaide in November 2019.

All this for just $33 for members and $44 for non-members
